Laurier students in Canada’s Armed Forces reserves spend their time balancing military life and academics. The Cord spent a weekend with these student-soldiers to find out why and how they do it.

Dave Shore

Dave Shore is an editorial writer for the Cord and has also written for the Maclean’s, Metro News, and the Witness. A native of the Prairies, Shore has spent the past decade living in Edmonton and working in newspapers, and has been with the Cord since 2005. He has written about everything from politics to pop culture, but is best known for his coverage of sports.

Joe Turocotte

Joe Turocotte is a special projects editor for the Cord. He has worked in newspapers in Ontario and Alberta, and has worked as a broadcast journalist and radio producer. He has also written for newspapers in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Ontario. He is a native of Winnipeg and has been with the Cord since 2007. He has written about everything from politics to pop culture, but is best known for his coverage of sports.

Standing Ground

Standing Ground is a Cord special project that explores the experiences of Canada’s Armed Forces reserves in the context of military training and education. It is a collaborative effort between the Cord and the Special Projects department. The project includes multimedia content such as photos, videos, and articles, which can be found on CordWeekly.com.

Laurier students in Canada’s Armed Forces reserves spend their time balancing military life and academics. The Cord spent a weekend with these student-soldiers to find out why and how they do it.

Dave Shore

Dave Shore is an editorial writer for the Cord and has also written for the Maclean’s, Metro News, and the Witness. A native of the Prairies, Shore has spent the past decade living in Edmonton and working in newspapers, and has been with the Cord since 2005. He has written about everything from politics to pop culture, but is best known for his coverage of sports.

Joe Turocotte

Joe Turocotte is a special projects editor for the Cord. He has worked in newspapers in Ontario and Alberta, and has worked as a broadcast journalist and radio producer. He has also written for newspapers in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Ontario. He is a native of Winnipeg and has been with the Cord since 2007. He has written about everything from politics to pop culture, but is best known for his coverage of sports.

Standing Ground

Standing Ground is a Cord special project that explores the experiences of Canada’s Armed Forces reserves in the context of military training and education. It is a collaborative effort between the Cord and the Special Projects department. The project includes multimedia content such as photos, videos, and articles, which can be found on CordWeekly.com.